

The advantages of our programme

For your budget	1- Reserve your tickets for Hampton Court and The Tower of London online. This will cost £79 instead of £93.50. If you are planning to visit within a year the Banqueting House or Kensington Palace, we advise you to buy a the annual Historic Royal Palaces membership. It costs £80 and allows you to visit the Tower of London, Hampton Court, Kensington Palace and the Banqueting House as many times as you like. You can buy it when you first visit any of these places. 2- We advise you not to buy the much publicised London pass. 3- Based on this programme, including the above advice, total entry fees to attractions will cost £144.50 4- Our advice saves you £14.50, not counting savings in time.
Transport	1- On the 25th and 26th of September, planned maintenance work will mean the closure of many London tube lines, including the Circle and Hammersmith lines. This was taken into account in the development of your plan. 2- For transport tickets, your best option is to buy a Pay as You Go Oyster card for the adults. Your children will travel free on the tube and buses but you will need to buy a zone 1-6 offpeak travelcard (£2 each) for them for the train trip on Saturday 25th. These tickets can be purchased in advance. It will cost £20 per adult to make the trips contained in our plan (including the tube from and to airport). http://visitorshop.tfl.gov.uk/english/introduction.htm
Managing your time	In addition to carefully planning the order of your visits and minimising wasted travel time, our plan optimises your holiday time by making use of the evening opening of the National Gallery on Friday evening and the early morning opening of St Paul's.

London's must see list despite the very expensive entrance price. Parts of this historical monument date back to the Norman conquest 1066, and it has a long and bloody history as a prison and execution site for people who fell out with past Kings and Queens (including Mary Queen of Scots and two of Henry VIII's wives). The Tower also houses the Crown Jewels, the Queen's collection of jewels and crowns, (which will impress even people not interested in jewellery). Probably the best way to see the Tower is with a free guided tour by one of the "Beefeaters" (Tower guards in traditional costume). For children, there are also many costumed events recreating historical episodes such as the Gunpowder Plot or the beheading of Mary Queen of Scots.

What else to see around Tower of London:

- When you exit the tube station, you will see parts of the Roman wall which delimited the City of London during the Roman time.
- Trinity Square: a peaceful garden which contains a large memorial to the 24,000 members of the merchant navy and fishing fleet who died during the World War 1. Behind stands an impressive building, the former Headquarters of the Port of London Authority which before was the European Headquarters of the insurance company Willis. They plan to convert it into a top range hotel. During the week, benches are occupied by employees of the city during their lunch break.
- All Hallows by the Tower: Located at the corner of a busy junction, it is the oldest church in the city (dating back to 675) and has a very interesting past. Founded by the Saxons, the church survived the Great Fire - Samuel Pepys watched London burning from the top of the tower. The church prides itself of having celebrated the marriage of John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States and was where William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania, was baptised. As many other buildings in the city, it was partially destroyed during WW2. The church has links with the Livery companies in London; in particular The Company of Watermen & Lightermen, Company of World Traders and the company of Carmen (in charge of the transport of goods within the City and long distance).
- Tower Bridge: One of the most well-known constructions in the world, Tower Bridge was built in 1894 to respond to the growing traffic from the city to the other side of the river. For a very long time, London Bridge (further upstream) was the only crossing point in eastern London. The bridge was built to allow the passage of boats, and still functions today, being raised about 900 times per year. To know when the bridge will be lifted, check their website. The upper walkway across the river between the two towers holds an exhibition about the building and operation of the bridge; it might interest engineering buffs.

What you can see on the other side of the river:

- City Hall: A striking rounded glass building on the south bank of the Thames near Tower Bridge, completed in 2002, and which houses the office of the Mayor of London (not the Lord Mayor).
- HMS Belfast: Launched in 1938, HMS Belfast is the only surviving battleship to have seen active service during WW2. It has served from Norway to Korea. When the ship came to the end of its active life, the Imperial War Museum launched a trust for the preservation of the cruiser and in 1971, the ship was docked in the Thames and opened to visitors. Inside, there are some very good reconstructions of life onboard with access to the shell rooms, kitchen and canteen, telecommunication room, dental surgery and the ship's operating theatre amongst others.
